

Ruth M. Glenn Named NCADV's Executive Director

October 8, 2014

Ruth M. Glenn

After careful consideration and in the best interests of the National Coalition Against Domestic Violence (NCADV) and our NCADV staff, we as the Board of Directors, are pleased to announce that Ruth M. Glenn has agreed to remain as the Executive Director of the NCADV.

NCADV's partners, donors and members have consistently and continually shown their support of NCADV to continue our work toward the inclusion of all voices of survivors and impacted loved ones, as well as our work on national policy and other aspects of social change to help end intimate partner violence.

We will continue our dedicated work for all survivors of domestic violence and continue to be the guiding source for the many programs, advocates, activists and others for information, training, support, and accountability to the battered women's movement.

We look forward to continuing that work with our supporters, NCADV staff, and Ruth.
